- 1) Craft an elevator speech for staff and volunteers. Make sure it features a real-world benefit that most people would value.
- 2) Discuss how your ministry could be a blessing in your context.
- 3) Are there any words you regularly use in worship, prayer, preaching, or communications to the public that might be misunderstood or which could actually hinder your work?
- 4) Are there any issues under debate in your local area or nationally that you can support from a theological perspective? Are there any secular organizations working in this field that you could lend your support to?
- 5) Discuss dissent and protest in terms of what is normally acceptable to your ministry.
- 6) Write a story that shows examples of what you would like to see change as a result of your ministry. Be descriptive.
