Discussion Questions

1. How can we, as a team, be more open to Christ continuing his work through us by his Spirit? Do we have any hesitations? If so, how can we overcome them?
2. Does our strategy development process encourage us to look for and be surprised by the creative fresh work of God today?
3. Does our strategy development process leave room for the prophetic role of leadership and spiritual analysis? If not, how should we adjust our process?
4. After reading the linked post From Human Wisdom to Godly Wisdom, how could we resolve any tensions between divine and human wisdom in our strategy development process? What would the process look like when human wisdom and divine wisdom work harmoniously together?
5. Jim Galvin has said, "Sometimes we need to start doing something, anything, just to change where we are and help us to find a way to go."
  - a. Why is doing something, anything, helpful even when you have no idea what to do next?
  - b. How does doing something, anything, open the door for God to act through your ministry?
