Discussion Questions

1. Craft an elevator speech for staff and volunteers. Make sure it features a real-world benefit that most people would value.
2. Discuss how your ministry could be a blessing in your context.
3. Are there any words you regularly use in worship, prayer, preaching, or communications to the public that might be misunderstood or that could actually hinder your work?
4. Are there any issues under debate in your local area or nationally that you can support from a theological perspective? Are there any secular organizations working in this field that you could lend your support to?
5. Discuss dissent and protest in terms of what is normally acceptable to your ministry.
6. Write a story that shows examples of what you would like to see change as a result of your ministry. Be descriptive.
